HONGKONG, AUGUST 10TH, 1912.

The sensational reports of the trial of over a hundred Koreans-many of them Christian converts-on a charge of conspiring to assassinate the Governor-General of Korca must prove deeply-interesting by all his acquaintances to be half-witted, reading to everybody, and especially to the members of missionary organisations. The Church Missionary Gleaner in a recent issue comments appreciatively on the fact that early in the present year the Japanese Cabinet called a conference of religious leaders-Shinto, Buddhist and Christianwith a view to securing the co-operation of all in promoting the progress of the people in things spiritual and the improvement of social conditions. The Conference consisted of 13 representative of Shintoism, 59 of Buddhism, and 7 of Christianity—one of each section of the Christian Church in the country: Presbyterians, Congregationalists. Methodists, Baptists, Anglicans, Roman Catholics and the Greek Church; and the Church Missionary Gleaner is anthropostic because in the first place, the its belief that Christians were disloyal, or that they or some of them sympathized with or were even parties to the anarchist plot against the Emperor's life which was discovered two years ago. Missionaries and converts alike have been subjected to vexa tious attentions on the part of the police. Christianity has, in consequence, been under a cloud. Now a change of Cabinet has taken place, and a change of policy is announced. It is openly admitted that a mistake has been made in the treatment of religion in the schools of the land and also in the treatment of Christianity. This conference was intended to mark this change, and it is universally regarded in Japan as pregnant with important consequences."

We commend our contemporary's attention to the reports of the conspiracy Judges in their examination of the suppose. prisoners. We take at random these extracts from the report given by the Japan Chronicle of an examination of one of the ings about the matter.

It was then agreed by the meeting that the question should be submitted to the foreigners, who acted as advisers, for their consideration. You and two others were appointed to bring the matter to the notice of certain foreigners, including J. H. Wells, W. N. Blair, Graham Lee, E. M Manly (?) W. L. Swallen, M. W. Baird, and J. G. Did Wells say to you that inflammatory speeches were of no use, but that the assassination of officials should be carried out?-No, he did not.

Consequently, the opinion of the head the Society, Baron Yun, was obtained, and was found to agree with the opinion expressed by the foreigners in regard t assassination. Yun said that that was the object of the Society, and must be carried out.-I do not know anything about such natters.

You all assembled that night at the Taisong school, when Moffett, who was evidently displeased at your failure to carry out your plans, made a remark to the effect that the Koreans were a people lacking in courage and decision. On the 20th of the same month you made another attempt on the life of the Governor-General, but it failed owing to the strict guard which was kept .-All this has never happened to me.

Do you know that the conspirators agreed had been ingeniously hollowed out. to leave the revolvers in charge of foreigners, and with this object packed them in five orange-boxes, which were entrusted for safe keeping to Moffett, Wells, Graham Lee Baird, and Holdcroft?-No, I do not know anything of the kind.

Questions like these, as we have already said, were constantly addressed to the prisoners as they came up for examination during the eleven days the trial lasted, and, in all, the names of about twenty foreign missionaries have been connected with this anarchist plot. The authority for the statements appears to have been a crazy native, who is stated to have been known and according to the testimony of the other that these allegations were true! ANOTHER UNIONIST VICTORY.

LONDON, August 9th.

The result of the bye-election in North-West Manchester to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Sir George Kemp (L) is as follows:

Sir J. S. Randles (U.) 5,573 Mr. Hewart (L.) 4,371

Unionist Majority ... 1,202 [Sir George Kemp, the retiring member, defeated Mr. Bonar Law in 1910 by a majority of 445.]

There was unusual excitement at the polling and voters came from the Continent, Madeira, and Egypt. Motors were engaged in bringing voters from the seaside and lakeside.

Mr. Bonar Law, in a telegram to Sir John Randles, says: -What Manchester says to-day England will say at the first opportunity. That opportunity cannot be long delayed.

And as for the Liberal Presbyterians of Scotland, their creed on the subject seems to be that a Liberal Government must not be embarrassed, and that claims of Irish Protestants must give

These Liberals did not learn their creed from the National Covenant, nor did they go to the Bible for it. If the Home Rule Nonconformists of England and the Home Rule Presbyterians of Scotland had any really intelligent conception of the claims of Christ as against the aggressions of anti-Christ in the State, they would not, and could not be Home Rulers. Until they get such a conception we can place no dependence on them or their enferuntds. Meanwhile we protest with special emphasis against their utterly unchristian disregard of the interests of their fellow-Protestants in Ireland, and their unpatriotic attachment to a most venal, unprincipled, and unpatriotic Government. And we further protest against the virtual establishment and endowment of Romanism by the State to serve the party ends of these Radical Nonconformists and Presbyterians. For, with amazing inconsistency, they, while holding that the State ought not to support any religion. are willing that the State should place the worst religion of all in the position of preminence which they know full well Home Rule will secure for it. If their doctrine is that in national action Christ is to have no preference over Antichrist, surely they ought, at least, to hold also the doctrine that Antichrist ought to have no preference over Christ. But in both directions their action is grossly unscriptural. They agree to exclude and depress Christ and His claims in State action, and they agree also to favour and is going to be a great blessing, and that exalt Antichrist on the score of in face of the villainous boycotting of neutrality. The fearful anomaly of pro-Protestants that has existed for years, fessing neutrality and yet preferring and still is very much in evidence. INTERESTING LECTURE ON THEIR DISCOVERY.

MALACCA IN THE SIXTEENTH CENTURY.

A large audience gathered at the Colombo Museum on July 10, to hear the Hon. Sir Hugh Clifford, K.C.M.G., de-iver a lecture entitled "Ferdinand Magellan and the wonderful voyage.

Sir Stanley Bois presided.

Sir Hugh Clifford's remarks were full of interest and were followed with close attention. He occasionally referred to a map of the world, which was of considerable assistance in following the lecture. In his introductory remarks he said that Ferdinand Magellan's name was a household word. He was known to fame as the first circumnavigator of the world, yet he never sailed round it. He was a fanatical Catholic and lost his life through imprudent and excessive zeal for the spread of the faith. But he was the first man to expose the futility of the famous Bull of Alexander, VI. Portuguese by birth, he worked and fought for the King of Portugal for many years in the East and Northern Africa. He it was who showed the Spaniards, who were the arch-rivals of the Portuguese, how to break up the monopoly of the trade of the Moluccas which Portugal had for years enjoyed, without running the risk of excommunicabion. He was 52 years old when he died, but the achievements which made his name immortal, were crowded into the last seventeen months of his life. was born at Villa de Sabroza in the district of Villa Real, Traz os Montes, and came of a noble and knightly-family. He spent his boyhood in the household of Queen Leonora, consort of King John II of Portugal. It was not known precisely when he went to the East, but he was at Cochin, in Southern India, as an adherent of Alfonso Dalboquerque, when, Dom Francisco d'Almeida and the more turbulent leaders with him to Malacca-among them Magellan.

In March, 1510, Diogo Mendez de Vasconcedos was sent out with four ships to avenge the insult to the King of Portugal. They went to a place called Goa, where they found Dalboquerque, then the Viceroy of the Indies, engaged an an extremely fierce fight with the natives of the place. Dalboquerque insisted that the ships should assist him, and ultimately Goa fell. Goa was perhaps better known to fame to-day by the fact that it gladdened our morning breakfast table with copies of the "Morning Leader." (Laughter.) Dalboquerque then went to Malacca, but on his way there did what was usual in those dayscaptured, between Ceylon and Malacca and Sumatra, five inoffensive merchant vessels who were trading in the vicinity. Arrived at Malacca, Magellan was with Dalboquerque-after the Sultan wanted to make a treaty of peace-attacked Malacca and it fell at the second as-Magellan, instead of taking it in the philosophical way in which they were expected to accept the inevitable refusal to an impossible request -(laughter)-went across to Spain and formally renounced his nationality, placing his services at the disposal of King Charles. King Manuel sent urgent messages entreating him to return, but Magellan refused. He had been made a Knight of he Order of Santiago and it thus fell about that some one, for the first time, in full possession of the Portuguese secrets with regard to the East, was able to collate them with the secrets as carefully guarded which the Portuguese had with regard to the West.

MAGELLAN'S EXPEDITION.

Magellan had himself doubled the Cape of Good Hope at least four times and he now learned, placed as he was in possession of Spanish records, of the great Pacific which had been discovered by Balboa. Accordingly Magellan proposed he should be placed in command of a fleet and should be allowed to seek the strait at the end of the South American Continent and thence to sail to th Moluccas by a western route. The King consented, and on August 10th, St. Laurence's Day, 1519, Magellan weighed anchor at Seville with the following fleet: "Trinidad," flagship, 110 tons, crew 62; "San Antonio," 120 tons, crew 57;

Eventually the fleet came to the Straits of Magellan and they were explored. "San Antonio" took the opportunity to flee back to Spain, apparently not having been satisfied with the treatment they had received when they attempted to mutiny. Having gone through the Straits, Magellan's fleet-the Santiago" had been wrecked and lost while exploring-entered the Pacific and sailed on a north-westerly direction for several months. The chronicler gave a harrowing description of this part of the voyage. They ate biscuits full of worms, drank yellow water that was putrid, ate ox-hides which had covered the top of the main yard and sawdust from the board. Rats were sold for one half ducat apiece, and even then they could not get them. Above all, the gums of both the lower and upper teeth of some of the men swelled, so that they could not eat under any circumstances and died. At last they came to the Unfortunate Islands-so named because they were found to be deserts and then to the Ladrones so called because the Islanders pillaged Magellan's men. A procession was made to the sick man's house and the chronicler said he and his two wives and ten girls were duly baptised. Magellan asked him how he felt and he spoke immediately, saying by the Grace of Our Lord he felt very well! (Laughter.) Before five days the sick man could walk. We bring them together here to show that, wherever people may be, they can find relief from all digestive disorders, in Mother Seigel's Syrup. It is prepared to cure all such maladies and-it does it.

Writing on March 14th, 1912, from 5, Turf Club Street, Turf-fontein, Transvaal, Mrs. J. D. Van Dyk says :- "At one time Indigestion had such a hold on my system that no kind of treatment seemed able to give me relief. I suffered severely with flatulence, heart palpitation, giddiness, and vomiting after eating. I became too weak and depressed to attend to my household duties. All food was distasteful to me and I was unable to digest even light food.

"Of course I declined in health. One day a neighbour advised me to see what Mother Seigel's Sprup could do. I took her advice and took the Syrup. It soon brought relief from pain :- I recovered strength and appetite and was soon in the best of health. I have had no return of the ailments."

AGATE FORMING DISEASE. Beckite is a form of chalcedony that is found in concentric layers encrusting and replacing fossil shells. The problem of its origin, has been studied by investigators; for more than half a century, and has been lately taken up by James Strachan, an Irish chemist, with such success that he believes his solution is thoroughly demonstrated. His conclusion is that the chalcedony is precipitated from silicacharged water by osmotic action in the gelatinous or colloidal matter contained in the shells. The precipitate replaces calcium carbonate, and the rings formed around the central disc represent periods of the chemical action. Banded flints have been similarly explained by Prof. Sollas. Mr. Strachan has caused the precipitation in the laboratory, and has produced the mineral artificially, showing the chemical action of the gelatinous mat-These siliceous deposits form, disease-spots analogous to the calcareous deposits constituting pearls.

A MOUND MYSTERY. The problem of the innumerable small | mounds scattered over north-eastern Texas has been brought to notice in a recent Water-Supply Paper of the United States Geological Survey, These mounds vary from 20 to 100 feet in diameter and from 2 to 5 feet in height, and are usually circular in outline, but are sometimes elongated a little in a north-east and south-west direction. An explanation of their origin is wanted. Human or animal agency, water erosion, glacial action and wind are among the causes suggested, but no theory has been established by satisfactory evidence.

AN UNUSUAL CAUSE OF DEATH. Metal poisoning from handling copper coins was the curious cause for death recently assigned at West Ham, Eng. The deceased, aged 27, had been employed to collect coins from penny-in-the-slot gasmeters, and his physician testified that the coins were often green with verdigris, which remained on the collector's hands and was absorbed through his habit of curling his moustache with his fingers. IMPROVED PLOUGHING.

The ploughing is an ancient implement that, though improved in shape, is still simply a broad spade that is dragged along horizontally. It breaks up the soil to the depth of a few inches, but it smooths down and compacts the underlying layer. As this is repeated with each ploughing, the subsoil becomes very dense and hard, resisting the penetration and storage of the water so essential to plant growth. Remarkable results have been reported i from dynamite ploughing, and are doubtless due to the loosening of the compacted layers to a considerable depth. The new plough announced by a Mississippi Valley inventor suggests improvement by a mechanical method. In a wheel are pivoted a large number of pointed rods, which remain loose during most of the wheel's revolution, but are automatically clamped as they near the ground, so as to be thrust downward and forward into the earth instead of merely dragging or scraping along. On coming out of the ground, the points drop into vertical position, with points upward. Ploughing with points may at least roughen up the subsoil surface, and make it more suitable for holding and absorbing water.

This does not happen when the large intestine is removed. It seems to be proven, therefore, that constipation originates in the large bowel, and that the poisoning or intoxeation in a constipated person is due to the intestinal microbes.

Arsenic has been found as a normal constituent in man and animals, and now Jadin and Astrug, two French biologists, arsenic from all, the quantities ranging from 0.03 part per million in the leek to to heat.

NECESSITY. HOUSEHOLD

IN the best regulated families the little ills of life will creep in. Some member of the family circle may occasionally suffer from Biliousness and Indigestion, and one or the other will from time to time exhibit the well-known symptoms of Constipation. From these little troubles more serious complaints arise, and should therefore not be neglected. The slight headache, had breath, and a discoloured tongue are the index to a disordered stomach; and the necessity of keeping a safe, sure, and reliable remedy in the house is apparent. By following such a course the more expensive method of calling in a doctor will be found quite unnecessary. That Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are the very best Family Medicine is vouched for by thousands of grateful men and women who speak from personal experience.

Dr. Morse's Indian Root Pills are not simply a purgative medicine which forces the food out of the body, depriving the stomach of its nourishment and thus starving the system. They contain the essential properties that are temporarily lacking in the stomach through weakness, and complete the digestion and assimilation, and so restore the functions of the digestive organs by obtaining the maximum of nutriment from the food which sustains the body and assures good health. DR. Morse's Indian Root Pills are an efficient, reliable, and safe remedy placed on the market at a price within the reach of all. The Pills being sugar-coated, are pleasant to take, and retain their full medicinal properties. They are packed in amber-coloured bottles-not in cheap wooden or pasteboard boxes-and are thus always fresh and clean, impervious to moisture, unaffected by climatic conditions, and do not deteriorate by keeping as all liquid medicines do.

A Working Housewife

Nervous Depression, Neuralgia, Sleeplessness-

A cheerful, bright way of looking at things, a brisk activity which easily enables her to do almost as much as two ordinary persons, are some of the immediate benefits Mrs. Parker derived from Phosferine. Like most hard-working mothers, Mrs. Parker never found time to look after berself, and, as is always the case, suddenly broke down under the strain of endless household activities. Sudden noises caused her to tremble in feeble distress, gloomy fears assailed her, neuralgia and sleeplessness tortured her nerves relentlessly, and it was from this depili of misery that Phosferine raised Mrs. Parker. That this immediate effect was achieved by two doses of Phosferine, and Mrs. Parker's cure made permanent by a continuance of the tonic, demonstrates that with the aid of Phosferine any husband can save his wife from innumerable distresses.

Positively Cured and Prevented.

Mrs. A. Parker, 3, Linden Grove, Nunbead, writes: "I got into a fearfully low nervous state through working too hard and overtaxing my strength. Any loud noise or a sharp knock at the door would throw me into a state of trembling and helplessness. I was always imagining all kinds of evils, and worrying about trifles. Neuralgia racked me with pain day and night, and prevented me from obtaining any rest. I got so worn and dejected that I could have cried, out of sheer misery. My husband persuaded me at last to take some Phosferine, and the effect was simply marvellous; the pains not only ceased, but I have had no return since. It seemed more like magic than anything else that a few drops of Phosferine could produce such a change. I kept on with it, and I began to gain strength; the neuralgia disappeared for good, the nervousness, dejection, and worry left me, and now I feel quite well."-Nov. 17, 1911.

Four days after the sensational escape | Muriel was not entirely in the conupon Marshmoor, nothing was more natural than the wife should remain in the vicinity.

It was a hot, lowering morning as Muriel came into her own boudoir, where breakfast was laid for her. The house ! was in charge of old Mrs. Parker, the house-keeper, a dear old thing who had known the Morduant girls from their youth, and who was almost like a mother to Muriel.

The girl entered her room. It was a bright and pleasant place, decorated in China blue and white. The white shelves upon the walls held innumerable photographs of the popular society girl's many friends in frames of beaten copper and silver. The little round table, gleaming with black napery and silver, had a huge copper bowl in the centre filled with a mass of sulphur-coloured roses. A brass kettle hissed above its little methyl lamp. It was about 9 o'clock, but the room was quite dark. Although it was summer, the sky was leaden colour and seemed charged with storm. Now and again, above the hum of the early traffic from adjacent Bond Street and the more distant highway of Oxford Street, there was a far-away and sullen murmur of thunder. Tall and slim in her morning wrap of dark red Indian silk, Murie came into the room, and snapped on two or three electric lights. She shivered a little as she saw the menace of day outside, shivered not with cold, but with a certain apprehension which had never left her now for many days.

Popular interest had not waned at al in the affair. An army of special correspondents tramped the moor. New theories of the most subtle and ingenious kind were daily promulgated, but so far there had been not the slightest approach to the truth. In this silence some of the journalists affected to see the imminence The Morduants lived in Grosvenor of discovery; but Muriel, better inform-
